The art of pipe-making

The art of pipe-making is based on old and noble traditions. These, coupled with many years of determined effort, have created the manufacture of the STANWELL PIPE, which caters for the special and individual taste of pipe lovers all over the world.

The STANWELL is a speciality pipe, made by skilled craftsmen in a modern factory. They are carved from the finest, most carefully selected briar roots from Corsica and Greece and they represent a thorough and accurate application of skill combined with the most modern technique.

Unlike the mass produced pipes that all resemble each other, STANWELL PIPES are made in special designs. Every pipe smoker's wish with regard to shape, quality and appearance can be fulfilled. A glance at the following pages will indicate some of the Special Models created by us.

STANWELL PIPES are hand-made — each is a work of art. The heart of the very best briar roots is carefully selected, and from this the pipes are carved by hand — a task which can be performed only by experts of many years practice, because the shaping of the bowls and stems requires the greatest artistic ability.

The making of the mouthpiece is equally important. The mouthpiece of a STANWELL PIPE is turned from the finest ebonite, ground and polished so that even the most fastidious smoker will be enthusiastic about its slender shape.

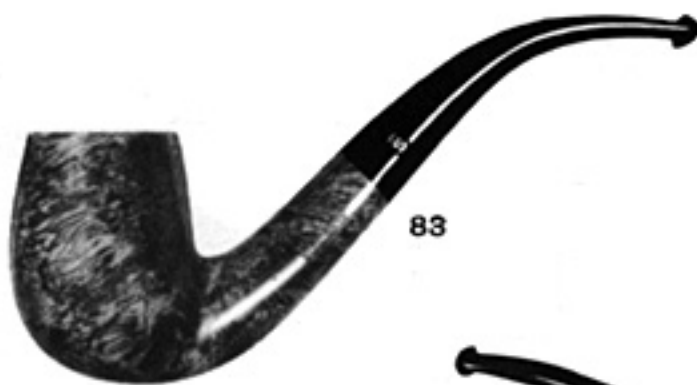

A hand-made STANWELL PIPE is second to none.

The beautiful characteristic surface, which is a distinctive feature of sandblast STANWELL PIPES, is the result of fine sand being blown, under enormous pressure, against the outside of the bowl. As a result of this process the pipe becomes lighter, the grain of the wood stands out in relief, and no two examples look alike. The smooth polished STANWELL PIPES are of an excellent quality, the bowls of the pipes are carefully selected and meticulously finished so as to bring out the natural beauty of the fine grains of the briar. All STANWELL PIPES possess excellent and valuable smoking qualities.
